I love that song and that video!

Today's track is Super Mario Land's theme song (Birabuto Kingdom)

While the Super Mario Land series was pretty short-lived, it only had 3 games in its series and even then the 3rd one turned into the Wario Land series, they were pretty good. It didn't ask the console versions of Mario anything and of course the music for those games were pretty damn awesome. I'm really fond of the main theme, it's a great and catchy tune, staple of the whole Mario games back in the day. But not only that, there are pretty good covers and arrangements of the songs that make it even better. My favorite I've heard and seen is the one that David Choi and Paul Dateh made. It really captures the essence of the song.

Pretty good, don't you think?

Be sure to check out David Choi's YouTube channel for some pretty awesome violin covers
