

It's a big week for gamers with the much anticipated release of Zelda: Tears of the Kingdom on the horizon. However, early copies of the game have leaked leading to some piracy of the game, and people bold enough to stream and even tweet about their gameplay. We discuss why people would want to do this, and look at another story about Nintendo taking action against GitHub, for Switch key extracting code posted on their website. Is it fair that Nintendo shuts this kind of project down? We discuss this, our gaming weeks, and MUCH more in gaming on another week of the longest running video game podcast, Orange Lounge Radio!
