

In a shocking move, it was announced by Sony this week that certain television videos from Warner Bros. / Discovery purchased on Playstation would no longer be available to watch, even by those that had purchased the videos. Somehow this is legal with all of the little text that we don't read before we buy these things. Social Media seems to be blaming the wrong camp for this move though, as we break down our perspective on who is to blame, and how a dangerous precedent like this might send waves thru the gaming industry. We discuss this and much more in another week of gaming news on the show where every gamer has a voice and the longest running video game podcast, Orange Lounge Radio!
