

This week, Nintendo announced their intention to pull the plug on Wii and DS online games. This leaves some people upset, but we ask our chatters and discuss on the host panel, is it really that surprising? What about the impending release of DS games on the Wii-U? We also get reactions from the listeners in our Foogles Question of the Week.

Also in the news this week, Twitch.TV announces streaming on the Xbox One, with some features missing from the Playstation 4 version. Is this likely to make more people stream on the Xbox One, or not make much of a difference at all? Also, Twitch beat Pokemon, what does this really mean for the future of interactive gaming?

Also in the news:

- * Steam Family Sharing is out of Beta

- * Wii-U and 3DS get system updates

- * Layoffs at Sony Santa Monica

- * Path of Exile success & expansion
