Tonight in the first half of our show we talk about a pair of interesting new possible peripherals for the Wii. A marketing slide spills the details on a Wii Bicycle, while a trademark may have let slip something we can only seem to call the WiiSac . At least the Wii can soon play DLC off the SD cards, and will soon be the home to yet another karaoke game. In part B tonight, we talk about a scary Silent Hill attraction coming to Orange County that the cast of OLR might just have to roadtrip to, if for no other reason than to get Rob to scream like a girl on camera. Also, a developer behind the new Wolfenstein game makes a pretty big bet, and LOKI ups the ante ten fold in a way that only he can. All this and more including your chatroom antics, phone calls, twitter topics and e-mails on the show where EVERY gamer has a voice: Orange Lounge Radio!
